Follow the Money: Tracing Ancestors on the Move

Melanie McComb, Senior Genealogist, melanie.mccomb@nehgs.org

"Follow the Money" Approach

- When vital records do not exist or have significant gaps, we turn to financial records to learn more about our ancestors
- This approach can be used to track an individual's movements through a country or overseas
- It can help clarify relationships between families

Types of Town Records

- Most town records have been digitized and are available on FamilySearch (note: few are indexed)
 - Catalog>Search by Place>Enter name of Town>Search>Town Records

• Ear Marks and Cattle Marks

- Owners mark their cattle and sheep with distinct patterns to prevent against theft
- The marks were submitted to the town clerk to be registered
- Marks could be passed down from father to son
- Only one son could inherit the father's mark
 - Registered marks could also be sold (part of the owner's estate)

• Pauper and Orphanage Records

- Town officials were responsible for supporting the poor and orphaned children
- Guardians may be appointed to care for orphans who were heirs to property
- Orphaned children may be "bound out" to learn a trade or sent to an institution like an orphanage

• Indenture Agreements

- Legal contracts made between an indentured servant and an employer "master"
- Outlines the duration of servitude and the rules that servant and master will abide by

Land Records

• Use census records, including the non-population schedules to identify ancestors that owned land

• Deeds

- Legal document transferring ownership of property from one person to another
 - Grantor = seller
 - Grantee = buyer
- Kept at the county level
 - Connecticut, Vermont and Rhode Island are stored at the town level
- Tip: If the deed sale is less than $1, this indicates a relationship between both parties

• Homestead Act of 1862

- Signed in 1862, this law allowed any American (including freed slaves) to purchase up to 160 acres of federal land
- Buyer was required to live on the land and perform necessary upkeep and additions
- Use the Bureau of Land Management website to search for land patents in the U.S.
- Land entry files can be obtained from the National Archives in Washington, D.C.
 Files are being digitized and added to Ancestry.com at https://www.ancestry.com/search/collections/60593/.
